Project Proposal Guidelines for the World Forest Institute International Fellowship Program

Projects submitted to WFI must meet the following requirements:

- The project should take advantage of being located in the Pacific Northwest. Elements of the project must involve collaboration with PNW forest industry, local organizations, researchers, or communities, etc.
- The project should include elements from both the Fellows home country and the US. For example, the project could make a comparison/contrast case study from examples in both countries.
- The project must be able to be completed within the time frame that the Fellow will be here. WFI does not fund work that occurs in locations other than at our center.
- WFI does not fund field trials as we do not have laboratory facilities available at our location. Most Fellows conduct projects that involve collecting qualitative data and involve surveys, interviews, literature review, shadowing, conferences, and networking.
- The project must have a tangible outcome, such as a report, manual, poster session, or an event (conference).

Please limit your proposal to 3 pages and organize in the following sections:

1. Fellow Name and Background Information
2. Timeline
3. Project Title
4. Project Background (description of the context)
5. Project Objectives (what will be learned and gained from this experience)
6. Project Methods
7. Project Outcome and Use (such as a report, manual, poster session, or event)
